The Pacific Review is published by the University of the Pacific, second-class postage paid Stockton, California 95211, six times a year, every two months July through June. It is designed to inform readers about the University, its people and its events. Pacific Review (ISSN 0164-9426).

Fall Enrollment Announced

Fall semester enrollment at the University is approximately the same as last year. A total of 5,908 students are attending the University, compared to 5,918 at this time last year.

UOP officials said the current figures include 3,925 on the Stockton campus, 1,580 at McGeorge School of Law in Sacramento, and 403 at the School of Dentistry in San Francisco.

The University's full-time equivalent enrollment on the Stockton campus stands at 3,647, compared to 3,701 last year and 21 below the budgeted figure for this year.

"We feel grateful that our enrollment has been maintained as well as it has, since most colleges and universities have experienced significant drops in this area," said Dr. Stanley E. McCaffrey, UOP president.

McCaffrey said encouraging totals involved the School of Engineering, with a full-time equivalent figure of 627 compared to 512 last year. He also commended the Admissions Office for an increase in new students to 1,120 from 1,041 last year. Another area with an increase was foreign students, with a boost of approximately 50 to a total of about 400 from some 60 different countries.

Most schools and colleges on the Stockton campus reported small declines in enrollment, which resulted in the lower overall totals.

The nationwide decline in students of college age is the result of the lower birth rate of 15-20 years ago. It is anticipated declining enrollments will continue at the nation's colleges and universities for about 10 years before the new student wave resulting from the recent increase in birth rates reaches college age.

National Post For Dental Dean

Dr. Arthur A. Dugoni, dean of the School of Dentistry, has been elected a trustee of the American Dental Association to represent the 13th District.

He began his first of two, three-year terms in October and is one of 14 trustees that sets policy for the Association. Dugoni is past president of the California Dental Association.

The American Dental Association is headquartered in Chicago.

Jarvis Named Acting Academic Vice President

Dr. Oscar T. Jarvis, dean of the School of Education for the past 10 years, has been named acting academic vice president of the University to fill the vacancy created by the death of Dr. Clifford J. Hand. (See page 11 for a story on Dr. Hand.)

Dr. Stanley E. McCaffrey, UOP president who announced the appointment, said that Dr. Elmer U. Clawson of the School of Education faculty has been named acting dean of the School.

Dr. Lee C. Fennell, dean of institutional research and University registrar, will continue to serve as acting assistant academic vice president, a position he was named to recently.

"Dean Jarvis, during his 10 years as dean of the School of Education, has demonstrated qualities which clearly indicate that he is well qualified to perform the important duties of academic vice president," McCaffrey said in announcing the appointments.

Jarvis came to UOP from the University of Texas at El Paso, where he was a professor of educational administration. He also had served as interim dean of the School of Education there and as chairman of the Department of Curriculum and Instruction.

During Jarvis' tenure at Pacific the School of Education has become one of only three in California to become fully accredited through the doctorate degree by the National Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education.

He is the author of several books and numerous articles on school administration and curriculum. He also has served on a wide range of state, regional and national committees and from 1980-82 was a member of the state "Blue-Ribbon" advisory committee on special education for the California State Department of Education Commission on Teacher Preparation and Licensing.

He received Bachelor of Science and Master of Education degrees from Howard Payne University, Brownwood, Texas. He earned the Doctor of Education degree from the University of Houston. In addition to his experience at the University of Texas at El Paso, he has taught at the University of Georgia.

Clawson has been a member of the School of Education faculty since 1974. He was among the principal developers of a new curriculum designed to teach economics to junior high students and serves as director of the Center for the Development of Economics Education at UOP. He also has served as chairman of the Curriculum and Instruction Department at UOP.

Weekly Campus Gatherings Pursue Varied Topics

The pursuit of knowledge is at the core of a university, and two weekly programs at Pacific — one old and one new — are aimed in this direction.

The Friday Symposia, a series of luncheon gatherings, has resumed with the fall semester. The programs, arranged by the Center for Integrated Studies, deal with scholarship, public and academic issues. Topics for the semester include weather, the music business, information technology in a library setting, federal reserve policy, and collective bargaining in higher education.

New this semester is the weekly series titled "The World on Wednesday." Arranged through the Office of International Programs and Office of International Services, the program began in September with two faculty members commenting on the Korean airline incident. Other topics include a UOP faculty member discussing Nicaragua and talk on Latin America by a former president of Ecuador.

Guest Speaker Views Program Review Process

Maintaining academic quality in times of financial stress was the theme of a talk by Dr. Kenneth Pye, the former chancellor of Duke University, at the All-University Convocation that highlighted the beginning of the new school year at Pacific.

Pye instituted a program review process at Duke that is similar to what Pacific is now undergoing. He said this activity is a "tortuous process" because it deals with abolishing programs. Nevertheless, he said decisions have to be made on the elimination of unsuccessful programs to insure the long-run economic stability of the University.

Pye commented that many colleges often have a tendency "to develop a wishing list rather than a plan of action" because of the seriousness of the undertaking. He commended Pacific for its approach to this situation, which involves intensive study by many segments of the University community.

The guest speaker, whose comments received an enthusiastic response from Pacific faculty, students and administrators, is now a law professor and director of the Center for International Studies and Comparative Area Studies at Duke. He served as chancellor at Duke in 1970-71 and 1976-82 and was dean of the law school there for seven years.

IES Alumni College Program Set

Imagine spending three weeks in England and France studying wine, architecture and poetry. The Institute of European Studies Alumni College is making such an offer to all alumni of IES, the overseas study program that has involved UOP for several years.

Next summer's program will involve a study of the wines of western France at the University of Nantes on June 23-29, study of English stately homes at the University of London July 3-7, and study of landscape architecture and poetry at the University of Durham July 10-16.

For details contact the Office of Lifelong Learning, University of the Pacific, Stockton, CA 95211 or phone (209) 946-2424.

Additional Funding For Muir Project

A UOP project to gather and publish on microfilm all of the papers of legendary conservationist John Muir received a boost recently.

The National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH) awarded the University a $15,000 matching grant, reported Project Director Ronald Limbaugh, a University history professor.

He said two Bay Area private funding agencies, the L.J. and Mary C. Skaggs and William and Flora Hewlett Foundations, are assisting UOP in matching the NEH grant. Limbaugh said the amount from NEH will reach $20,000 by the end of this year.

The Muir project, which started in 1981 and has a 1985 completion date, has received more than $100,000 in funding. The project is headquartered at the Holt-Atherton Pacific Center For Western Studies at UOP. Aiding Limbaugh are editorial assistant Kirsten E. Lewis and student assistants Joanne Tashima, Rosemary Bernal, and Vicki Fortuni.

Volleyball Team Aims For Nationals

The women's volleyball team at UOP is off to an impressive start while aiming for a fifth consecutive national tournament bid.

The Tigers of Coach Terry Liskevych have dominated all their opponents by rolling up a record of 15-0. Several of their victims are teams ranked in the top 20 in America, and most of the matches are a 3-0 sweep for UOP.

UOP is ranked second in the nation to defending NCAA champion Hawaii in the two national polls.

A major test for the Tigers will be the prestigious Wendy's Classic on Nov. 12-13 in Stockton. The four teams in the tournament, UOP, Hawaii, UCLA and Stanford, are ranked as the top four teams in the U.S.

Shipwreck Article In Historical Journal

An article dealing with the wreck of the S.S. Winfield Scott in 1853 is featured in the current issue of The Pacific Historian.

The quarterly journal on Western history and ideas is published by the Holt-Atherton Pacific Center For Western Studies at the University.

The Scott was a Gold Rush steamer that traveled between Panama and San Francisco until a fateful night in December, 1853 when it ran into the rocks off Anacapa Island in the Santa Barbara Channel and sank. Over the years divers have uncovered numerous artifacts from the ship, and the area of the wreck is now preserved as a historic site by the National Park Service.

Other articles in the Historian include the contributions of John Muir to the study of the geology of Yosemite, the activities of Sylvester Allen Ballou — one of the first California State Assemblymen, thoughts of noted historian W.H. "Ned" Hutchinson on the West, and the brief career as a Nevada judge for John Wesley North.

Information on obtaining The Pacific Historian is available by contacting the Pacific Center at the University.

Internship Program For Student Teachers

An internship program has been established at the School of Education that will allow selected students to be paid for teaching duties in public schools.

Dr. Oscar T. Jarvis, dean of the School when the program was announced, said, "The internship will be an alternative to student teaching; the interns will usually be mature, experienced college graduates who will hold an internship credential and who will receive a teaching credential upon successful completion of a school year of full-time interning."

Jarvis said the program, which has been approved by the State Commission on Teacher Credentialing, means that the interns are in effect temporarily credentialed teachers learning through on-the-job experience. The interns are hired by school districts, after their eligibility has been determined by UOP, and they will be paid at least one half a beginning teacher's salary. The activities of the intern will be monitored during the year by a selected group of educators.

The interns in elementary schools are expected to receive a wide range of assignments, according to Jarvis, such as their use for overflow or split classes, team teaching, in-house substitution and special activities. "The internship is not to be used to substitute a lesser-paid novice for a full certified teacher," added Dr. William Bacon, who will direct this program at the School of Education.

Buckley To Visit Campus

The Associated Students (ASUOP) annually bring some of the most popular speakers in America to campus, and this year promises to be no exception.

F. Lee Bailey will be on the campus in the spring, and a major speaker this fall will be William F. Buckley Jr. on Tuesday, Nov. 15.

His 8 p.m. lecture in the Conservatory of Music Auditorium will be sponsored by ASUOP and open to the public. Tickets will be priced at $2 for UOP students and $5 for the general public.

Buckley, one of the best known conservatives in America, is host of the popular "Firing Line" television program and founder of the National Review magazine. He writes a syndicated newspaper column that appears in more than 300 newspapers throughout the U.S. and has served on this country's delegation to the United Nations.

Buckley has written several books and has contributed articles to most of the major American publications.

Arbor Walk Brochure Highlights Campus Landscape

The landscape of the University campus in Stockton has long been recognized as one of the greatest assets of Pacific. The ivy covered buildings, numerous flower gardens and collection of trees and shrubs bring a park-like setting to the academic environment.

Now a new brochure is available that will better acquaint interested visitors and community residents with this facet of the University.

The Pacific Arbor Walk is a guide to the international collection of trees and shrubs on the 200-acre campus. The location and description of 100 different species are noted in the free brochure, which is available in the Burns Tower Lobby.

Dr. Dale W. McNeal, a botanist who chairs the Biological Sciences Department, compiled much of the data for the brochure with assistance from Charles E. Ahrens, superintendent of grounds.

"A number of unusual and interesting species of trees are on this campus," explained McNeal in saying the botanical specimens are viewed frequently by students for classroom projects.

McNeal said the oldest trees on the campus are the valley oaks that were here long before the 1924 arrival of Pacific. He said these trees also are the only ones native to the floor of the San Joaquin Valley. McNeal estimated the age of these oaks to be in the 250 to 300 year range.

The tallest trees, he added, are probably the giant redwoods and sequoias that exceed 100 feet in height.

Among the more unusual specimens are a hybrid English walnut at the front of the campus that was developed by Luther Burbank, cork oak trees normally found in Southern Europe and Northern Africa, and a primrose tree common to Norfolk Island in New Zealand.

Several species of flowering trees display brilliant colors at regular intervals throughout the year. These include the Japanese cherry, mikado cherry, pink crabapple, Japanese apricot and crepe myrtle.

Other types of trees spread throughout the campus and listed in the brochure include the fruitless mulberry, eucalyptus, cypress, spruce, locust, cedar, pine, birch, magnolia and liquidambar.

Foreign Student Adviser Selected For National Position

Ann Helm, the director of international services and foreign student adviser at the University, has been selected for a position with the United States Information Agency (USIA).

She left the campus in October to spend a year in Washington, D.C. as an academic adviser for the USIA Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs, Division of Student Support Services.

Her duties will encompass working with U.S. universities and agencies on international educational exchange, training U.S. foreign service overseas personnel in student advising, and developing programs to improve the experience of U.S. students going abroad.

Helm, who has been at UOP since 1978, was selected for the position in competition with more than 100 individuals from throughout the country.

While Helm is away from the campus, her position will be held by Marcia Makino, who is taking a year's leave from the Bechtel International Center staff at Stanford University.

Joseph King used 5,000 toothpicks to build this chair.

Toothpick King At Engineering School

News stories on the hobbies of faculty members can bring some interesting results, and this was certainly the case recently with Joseph King.

The University News Bureau distributed a story to the media concerning King's hobby of building a chair out of toothpicks. The article was used extensively by the Stockton media and picked by a television station for distribution nationally to more than 200 CBS affiliates.

King, who joined the School of Engineering in the fall, constructed the chair using 5,000 toothpicks and 20 tubes of glue. It took about 200 hours over a three-month period to complete the task. Although the chair weighs only four pounds it can hold in excess of 1,100 pounds.

This was the second toothpick project for King; the first was an 11-foot in diameter space station model that is on display in the engineering school's Khoury Hall. This space station, which consumed 30,250 toothpicks, involved 400 hours of labor. It can be disassembled for moving purposes because it is comprised of 19 interlocking pieces. "I can put this together in about three minutes because it interlocks within itself and is held together by its own weight," explained King. "Because of this design," he added, "if you were to turn it upside down it would fall apart."

King became interested in the toothpick projects while in the Navy. A friend would build various geometric designs out of the small wooden sticks. "The basic principles are easy to learn," he said in explaining this type of construction. He did, however, develop a complete set of plans before starting, which is when his engineering background was an asset.

"A key factor in doing this is getting good toothpicks, and I use the ones that are tapered at the ends and round in the center. They also must always be the same length. Quality control can be a problem, and the brand I use (Diamond) is very good in this area," he said. To bond the toothpicks together, King experimented with several brands of adhesive before settling on the Duco brand of modeling glue.

For his next project, he is considering building a 10 to 15 foot replica of the Eiffel Tower that would be strong enough to climb.

Much Ado About Books

Several years ago a group of School of Education faculty members realized that young people were becoming more interested in reading. They decided to do something about this fact, and the result was "Much Ado About Books", a symposium where several of the leading authors of children's books were invited to the campus to discuss their writing.

The event, now in its seventh year, has grown in stature to become recognized on a national scale, and some 350 people are expected at this year's symposium on Oct. 28 & 29.

The two-day event attracts teachers, librarians, writers, parents and others interested in children's literature. The San Joaquin County Authors' Symposium sponsors the event, with assistance from the California Media and Library Educators Association.

The guest speakers this year will include:

— Marcia Brown, an author and illustrator known for "Once A Mouse," "Stone Soup," "Three Billy Goats Gruff" and "Shadow."

— Julia Cunningham, author of "Drop Dead," "Burnish Me Bright," "Far In The Day" and "Macaroon."

— Adrienne Jones, author of more than 10 books for children and young adults, including "Beckoner," "Hawks of Chelney," "So Nothing Is Forever" and "Whistle Down A Dark Lane."

Alumni Expand Goals

Positive Outlook Prevails At Mountain Retreat

A pioneering spirit was evident at the annual Pacific Alumni Association retreat held in early September at the University's Feather River Preparatory School near Blairsden.

It may have been influenced by a power failure on the opening night, which prompted a scramble for flashlights and candles, or perhaps by the absence of running water the next morning.

These minor inconveniences were corrected quickly, but the spirit of enthusiastically overcoming obstacles prevailed for the 50 people who participated in the weekend of planning alumni activities for the year.

John Fruth '66 battled a bout with jet lag brought on by numerous business trips to Europe for his employer, Standard Oil of California, to assume the presidency of the Association from Douglas Pipes '65, assistant district attorney for Contra Costa County.

Little mention of past accomplishments was made as plans were developed for the future. Uppermost in nearly all of the plans was the effort to involve more alumni in the activities of the Association.

A new committee on admissions was added to the five standing committees and given the charge of working closely with the University's Admissions Office to assist in the recruiting of highly qualified students. Anne Seed '80 has joined the Admissions Office staff to coordinate volunteer activities. She outlined plans for the development of alumni representatives in key areas in California.

Each standing committee developed a set of goals and objectives for the year ahead. They follow:

Continuing Education and Travel — Encourage alumni and parents to participate in continuing education and travel programs offered through the University's Office of Lifelong Learning and locate talented alumni volunteers who wish to lead groups on tours or conduct classes and workshops.

The committee also hopes to involve more University faculty in continuing education programs in locations other than the Stockton campus. A survey of faculty has been conducted to determine interest, and a resource list has been developed.

Events — Assist in the staging of on-campus events for alumni and parents and increase participation of local (San Joaquin County) alumni and parents in these events.

This committee has assisted in the staging of such events as Homecoming and Pacific Family Day. Plans call for the development of a larger cadre of alumni who can work with the Board of Directors and with the University staff in a wide range of projects in addition to the major events.

Awards — Distribute nomination forms early in the spring so that this information can be received well in advance of the August 1 deadlines. Established awards include the Family Award and distinguished awards in the areas of University Service, Public Service and Professional Service.

Nominees for these awards, and candidates for recognition in other ways, should be submitted to the Office of Alumni and Parent Programs at the University.

Clubs — Stimulate increased activities in the 10 active clubs in California, improve communication between the clubs, the University and the Board, and establish a new active club in the San Francisco East Bay Area.

Numerous club activities already are being held, but thus far there has been little coordination among the clubs. Also, more information is needed from the University so that club activities can be scheduled to take advantage of University events. There also was a stated need to share more information about the activities of the clubs with all alumni.

Development — Increase the participation in the Annual Pacific Fund from 16 to 24 percent (a 100 percent increase was accomplished during the past year), increase support from young alumni (graduates since 1963), and increase the average gift level from alumni who graduated prior to 1963. A major incentive for the increased participation in the fund raising program is a grant from The James Irvine Foundation that matches alumni gifts in various categories.

Incoming President Fruth expressed appreciation for the work of the Board during the retreat and stated that while the goals may be ambitious, they also are attainable.

Alumni interested in becoming involved with Association activities are encouraged to contact the Office of Alumni and Parent Programs at the University or the Pacific Club leaders in their area:

Margaret Branson's Best Sellers

Reach America's Youth

*Two roads diverged in a wood, and I --
I took the one less traveled by,
And that has made all the difference.*

from "The Road Not Taken" by Robert Frost

AT 17, a bright Modesto High School senior turned down an alumni scholarship covering tuition, room and board at the University of California, Berkeley. She didn't like such a big campus, she told friends who thought it madness to let the opportunity pass. She chose instead to enroll at the smaller, lesser-known College of the Pacific where she had no scholarship, knowing it would strain her parents financially.

Now, 43 years later, Margaret Stimmann Branson smiles with the memory of her decision. "It was sort of like a fork in the road...and I'm sure that has made all the difference to me."

A much-published textbook author, Branson credits Pacific for giving her the foundation in writing and communication skills she has used throughout her career as a teacher, school administrator, writer, editor and educational curriculum consultant. In a recent interview, she gave a brief autobiography that begins with a look at the College of the Pacific as she saw it in the fall of 1940. It seems she remembers the people the best, and then-President Tully Knoles proved to be her most unforgettable character.

"He was a magnificent man, I think one of the greatest intellects I've ever encountered," she recalls. "He was tremendously involved with the students and he knew, as you got to be a senior, everyone by name. He felt it was his obligation to let every student who came through rub intellectual shoulders with him personally. I was constantly amazed at the range of subjects that absorbed him and his energy and command. I'm sure he made a tremendous impression on each one of us."

Others who impressed her include Jake Jacoby, Gustavus Adolphus Werner and George Colliver. She also remembers writing teacher Martha "Patty" Pierce, and world literature and philosophy instructor Irving Goleman. Today, she considers the exposure to that latter combination one of the greatest contributions to her education.

"In comparing my collegiate experience with others, the thing I took for granted at Pacific was that we were challenged intellectually. People sought you out — you didn't have to go and look for a professor during office hours. If they thought you had something, or if they thought you weren't doing what you were capable of doing, you were pursued aggressively. They demanded you do your best. I was out of college some years before I realized the value of the experiences I had, and the people I met there."

Margaret officially graduated in 1944, although she had finished her course work in July, 1943, earning bachelor's degrees in both economics and sociology. She was not yet 21 years old. Next, she considered careers in law or education. On strong recommendation from her husband, Rodney Branson, and her father she studied for a teaching credential at Cal.

In 1945, she started teaching high school history, English and social sciences in Oakland. Over the next 20 years she worked her way up to the supervisory level.

Branson's introduction to the publishing world came in a curious way. As a public school supervisor, she was in a position to evaluate textbooks. In 1964 she attended the National Council for the Social Studies in Miami, Florida. There, at a cocktail party hosted by Ginn and Company textbook publishers, she met one of the top editors, Ron Edgerton. "He asked me what I thought about their textbooks, and I criticized them. He was very interested, and we had a nice conversation," she recalls. "I went on home, and about six weeks later got a telephone call from Edgerton. He wanted to know, as long as I was going to be so critical of his texts, if I thought I could write one. I said I didn't know...I'd never written a textbook, and he invited me to come to Boston to get acquainted. Well, I thought, I've never been to Boston..."

In her first effort, Branson was to co-author a book with two men. Shortly after they'd begun, both co-authors quit the project. She learned then that few people have the discipline to write a text.

"It was interesting because at the time my two sons were young, about fourth and eighth grades, and I had that job in Oakland with all the demands that were there. But I got my manuscript done. With all of the other demands on my time, which included buying the groceries and washing the dishes and being a mother, I was astounded that the men couldn't seem to get their part done."

The book, then, not by design but by accident, was her first text as a single author — an unusual feat. "It wasn't all that good a textbook," she says, "but interestingly enough, and fortunately for me, it fit a niche in the market and sold well."

After the first book, she was hooked. "At the time," she says, "I was teaching part-time at Mills and Holy Names Colleges and at U.C. Davis, and I was still an administrator for Oakland public schools. My husband was very patient, but he wondered if I could perhaps choose two of my three careers. After much consideration, I decided to give up my position in Oakland and stay with writing and teaching. The college schedule gave me much more freedom."

Through some 20 textbooks (mostly American history, government and economics) and dozens of articles, manuals, curriculum guides and even filmstrip scripts published since 1970, Margaret Branson has dedicated that freedom to the education of America's youth.

Bulging with file boxes, Branson's garage and closets in her Bakersfield home testify to the extensive research textbook writing requires. She uses primary sources of information whenever possible and ventures to obscure museums and libraries all over the country searching for letters, diaries and other original material. "New searches have revolutionized what we know about American history, and new facts make a great deal of difference," she says. "That's why new texts have to be written."

Pacific Profiles

Branson's 1982 best seller, America's Heritage, gives junior high readers a look at history unavailable to previous generations. "The great story we have to tell," she says, "is not bound up in the white male elite. It really irritates me that in the story of William Penn, for example, his wife, Hannah, gets no mention. She was a genius — the only daughter of a successful English merchant. She kept the accounts and ran the business end of things. It's very important to socialize ourselves about the contribution of women in history. That's not feminist, that's to state what really happened."

"I feel that it's absolutely fundamental that kids have a basic understanding of government and economics. One of the things we have neglected is the whole process of the political socialization of our young. Every society has got to acculturate its young, there's just no way out of it. That means the kids have to have a sense of history. They have to know how they happened to drop into this world at this point. They must understand how this country was put together — that people came from every place, and what they were searching for, and what their struggles were and so on. Without that, it's as though you would grow up in your own family, with no sense of who your parents are, or grandparents were, and what they were trying to accomplish. You can't trust this information to chance; it's a common heritage every American shares."

In 1981, finding herself alone with her cat in a nine-room house in Piedmont, her husband recently deceased and her sons grown, Margaret needed a change and a new challenge. She took a position in the Kern County Superintendent of Schools Office where she consults on history and social science curriculum, continues to write, edit and lecture, and is on loan about half-time to the California State Department of Education.

Another of her interests lies in travel, and in the past she has visited Japan, Africa, Asia, South America and Lapland (to study the reindeer migration). In June she'll go to Germany.

An avid reader, Branson won't turn in at night before reading The Wall Street Journal and Christian Science Monitor cover to cover. And she clips constantly. She listens selectively to public television, especially "Washington Week In Review," "Wall Street Week" and the "MacNeil/Lehrer NewsHour" to keep abreast of what's happening in education.

Though someday she may try her hand at writing historical fiction, for now she's content with school texts. She finds the challenge exhilarating. "It's so gratifying when I finish a text, especially if I am lucky, like last time, to have a national best seller, to know I am teaching tens of thousands of kids. It's an extension of myself."

Fernando Zumbado

IT'S 11:30 on a Monday morning, and the sun beams from a cloudless Stockton sky. Fernando Zumbado settles on a wooden bench in the University Rose Garden. He gazes out across Knoles Lawn and tells of his introduction to UOP.

One of the first Latin American students recruited by then Dean of Admissions Elliott Taylor in 1963, the 18-year old Costa Rican came to California with a sparse knowledge of the English language and the outside world. Elbert Covell College cushioned his cultural shock. Zumbado graduated with an economics degree in 1967, married Karen Hancock, COP '66, and completed graduate studies at the University of Kansas and U.C. Riverside.

Later, in Costa Rica, Zumbado taught economics, was appointed Minister of Urban and Regional Planning, and then became a United Nations (U.N.) international civil servant/economist for Latin American development. In 1981 the Social Democratic Party won the national election in Costa Rica, and the following spring Zumbado found himself enroute to New York as Ambassador to the U.N.

Sixteen years after receiving his diploma Zumbado returned to UOP to deliver a commencement address for his alma mater.

"When I came to Covell, there was a great deal of interest in Latin America in this country. Then, for a while, that interest evaporated. Now, when I come back 20 years later, Latin America is again of interest because of the crises. It's a sad thing that the response sometimes comes too late. Covell is a reflection of that loss of interest, which is sad to see when relations are so important. The College gave America the chance to see all of Latin America and get a feeling for it — a cultural experience. A gap in understanding causes conflict among nations."

Nothing has brought that point home to Zumbado more vividly than his ambassadorship. At the U.N. he works to improve his country's image. Caught in the middle of Central American turmoil, Costa Rica operates in an unstable economic market, resettles refugees from its warring neighbors, and remains the only country in the world without an army. It also owes more money per capita to outside lenders than any other country. While he deals on one front with private banks, trying to renegotiate the debt, he struggles on another for international human rights, an issue of utmost importance in his democratic country.

Costa Rica supports the idea of establishing a high commissioner for human rights in the U.N. — one who will deal with the facts and not be influenced by the politics that render so much of the U.N.'s business ineffective. Today, fighting for human rights frustrates the Ambassador because many countries will not permit the issue to be discussed in an international forum. Although the U.N. promotes dialog between nations, Zumbado finds no commitment on the part of some governments to live according to the charter they've signed. "There is no guarantee that resolutions, when passed, will be followed," he says. "There is not enough effort to reach a consensus... they pass resolutions like crazy."

Yet, he sees hope and returns to his commencement comments on a brighter note.

"If there is something I appreciate in my work at the United Nations, it is the opportunity to learn what motivates people of different cultures, and to understand that one of the causes of conflict is, exactly, the lack of understanding. Inter-American relations are in a crisis. There is an urgent need to reach for the causes that unite us and try to overcome those that separate us. A good way to start this new beginning is, precisely, through the creation of ambients like those that Covell College represents, where people from all over the continent can learn to communicate, to understand other peoples' points of view and their needs... There is a clear agenda for a renovation of inter-Americanism in the 80s. The promotion of democratic ideals, economic development and social justice should be on top of that agenda."

1982-1983 HONOR ROLL OF GIVING

The University of the Pacific

Message From the President

Support for Pacific by its alumni, parents and friends has been extraordinary in these most difficult times.

In 1982-83 a record $587,105 in unrestricted funds for current use was received from 3,555 contributors. Of these amounts, a record number of alumni, 3,271, contributed over $227,000. This splendid demonstration of support enabled us to surpass our Pacific Fund goals for 1982-83.

These results speak for themselves. They reflect far better than words the magnitude of the effort and loyalty of all who have given and worked to achieve them. Voluntary annual support is essential in maintaining the high standard that is expected at the University of the Pacific.

We are grateful to the alumni, parents and friends who contributed the record amount, and I personally want to express my deep appreciation to both the donors and the volunteer workers for their individual generosity and collective support. You are helping to keep our University strong and vital in the face of difficult challenges faced by all higher education.

Yours very sincerely,

Stanley E. McCaffrey
President

Thank You for Meeting the Alumni Challenge

The James Irvine Foundation challenged Pacific alumni to increase their annual support to the University over the previous year. Alumni who graduated prior to 1968 would be matched on a 50 percent basis. Graduates since 1968 would be matched at 100 percent. For new contributors the University would also receive an additional $25 premium.

Pacific alumni responded in exceptional fashion.

Funds from Irvine

We are deeply indebted to the James Irvine Foundation for the faith and support they are providing. The Foundation has continued the Alumni Challenge for 1983-84.

This Honor Roll of Annual Giving lists only those contributors who gave in support of the current operations of the University's Stockton Campus for the fiscal year September 1, 1982 to August 31, 1983, and includes some donors who are now deceased. Additionally, many contributors gave to various projects within the Campaign For A Greater Pacific as well as KUOP and the Pacific Athletic Fund. We wish to extend our appreciation to all who support the University of the Pacific. If we overlooked your name, misspelled it or in any way listed you improperly, please call or write us. Our telephone number is (209) 946-2501, or write the Annual Pacific Fund, Burns Tower, University of the Pacific, Stockton, CA 95211.

Volunteers

The many alumni, parents and friends listed below volunteered a precious commodity -- time -- to the University during the 1982-83 Annual Pacific Fund campaign. The University proudly recognizes and publicly thanks all its volunteers.

Outlook

FOR A GREATER PACIFIC

To inform alumni, parents, and friends of campaign progress

November, 1983

Recent donations will finance a new rehearsal center, 100-seat recital hall, central recording studio and music library for the Conservatory.

$1.5 Million Will Renovate Conservatory

Two generous benefactors have give $1.5 million to the University's Conservatory of Music that will finance a major improvement in the facilities at the professional school.

An anonymous donor, who made a $500,000 gift to Pacific in 1980, recently contributed $1 million in response to several major needs of the Conservatory. A new music facility will be constructed to include a rehearsal center for vocal and instrumental groups, a small recital hall, with approximately 100 seats for student and faculty performances and a central recording studio. $250,000 of the $1 million gift will be used to create a modern music library section of the planned William Knox Holt library.

Several old steel buildings now used for these purposes will be demolished when the new projects are completed.

The Conservatory Auditorium, one of the oldest structures on the Stockton campus and a Pacific landmark, will be refurbished as a distinctive concert hall through a $500,000 gift from Alex G. Spanos, an honorary Regent and long-time benefactor of the University.

This gift, part of a $1 million donation from Spanos, will honor his wife, Faye. The renovation is expected to include a new heating system and air conditioning, plus new seating, decorating, restrooms and general refurbishing.

For more than 100 years the Conservatory has trained talented students for the music profession. With the school now in its second century, these physical improvements will help preserve and enhance the rich heritage of the Conservatory.

The other $500,000 portion of the $1 million Spanos gift is designated for the library project and completion of unfinished areas of the Alex G. Spanos Center.

New Challenge Grant Boosts Library Campaign

The National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH) has awarded a $600,000 challenge grant to the University for renovating and expanding library humanities facilities on the Stockton campus.

The grant will push the total gifts and pledges for the planned William Knox Holt Library to nearly $4 million toward an estimated $6 million goal. The NEH grant must be matched by UOP on a three for one basis.

A $2 million pledge from the William Knox Holt Foundation, and an additional $500,000 pledge by UOP Regent Holt Atherton, spurred momentum for this much needed facility. A Stockton campus campaign to raise additional funds resulted in an unprecedented number of faculty and staff participants and more than $140,000 raised. Dr. Roy A. Whiteker, dean of College of the Pacific and chairman of the campus-wide effort, reported that nearly 600 faculty, staff and students responded with gifts and pledges.

Key individuals challenged the campus with matching grants. Robert M. Eberhardt, chairman of the UOP Board of Regents and Douglass M. Eberhardt, along with the Bank of Stockton, initiated a challenge grant of $25,000. Subsequently, they were joined by an $11,000 challenge from Regent and Mrs. Carlos Wood and two anonymous contributions totaling $20,000.

The library project will include total renovation and re-design of the main library building, plus an additional building that will approximately double the size and usable space of the library. The newly designed building will include the permanent home of the Holt-Atherton Pacific Center for Western Studies.

Khoury and Bechtel Present for Dedications

Engineering Facility Opens

Said Khoury, founder of one of the largest construction firms in the Middle East, was introduced as the honored speaker by President Stanley E. McCaffrey at the dedication of Khoury Hall. The new $1.7 million engineering building was named after Khoury by the UOP Board of Regents. His contribution of $500,000 toward construction of the facility was the largest single gift received by the University for the building.

Khoury Hall provides two classrooms, six major laboratories, six faculty offices, a secretarial office, a student lounge, and a conference room. The new facility has enabled the University to add a new curriculum in mechanical engineering.

Khoury directs Consolidated Contractors Co., which is headquartered in Greece, and, with additional offices in the Middle East and London, employs some 12,000 workers. Khoury is the father of Toufic Khoury, a 1980 UOP engineering graduate. Mr. and Mrs. Khoury, and three of their children, were present for the dedication.

Khoury family members (L to R): Taima, Toufic, Salwa, Said and Waddad.

International Center Completed

Dr. Stephen D. Bechtel, Sr., senior director of the Bechtel Group, was a key speaker at the dedication of the Bechtel International Center.

A joint contribution of $250,000 from Bechtel, his wife, and UOP Regent and Mrs. Paul L. Davies, Jr., was designated to remodel and expand the former Callison Lodge.

Offices of the Office of International Programs and the Office of International Services, along with a library, conference room, lounge, and kitchen are located in the Center.

Bechtel has been interested in international affairs and the education of foreign students for many years. He established a similar Bechtel International Center at Stanford University some 15 years ago.

Joining the Bechtels and Davies at the dedication were UOP President Stanley E. McCaffrey and a number of faculty, student and administration leaders.

The progress chart gets another stripe as library funds near $4 million.

National Committees Announced

Three University Regents have been named chairmen of major committees in the campaign For A Greater Pacific.

Holt Atherton, chairman of the board, Atherton Industries, San Antonio, Texas, is leading the national committee for the library campaign. Ted F. Baun, chairman of the board, Clovis Ready Mix, Fresno, is chairing the drive to complete funding for the new Engineering building. Tom Witter, executive vice president, Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc., San Francisco, is heading the national committee for the School of Business and Public Administration.

Library

The library project involves the William Knox Holt Library, and the drive is approaching the $4 million mark toward a goal of $6 million. Serving on the committee with Atherton are Dahl C. Burnham, Stockton, a retired private investor; Joan Darrah and Bing Wallace, both Stockton civic leaders and UOP Regents; Robert M. Eberhardt, Stockton, president of the Bank of Stockton and chairman of the UOP Board of Regents; Nicholas L. Frazee, San Diego, president, Frazee Industries; E. Pendleton James, New York, personnel executive, P. James & Associates, Inc.; Lucy Ritter, Sacramento, retired financial executive and UOP Regent; Albert Shumate, San Francisco, physician; Thomas S. Thompson, Stockton, retired president of Morningside College and former UOP vice president; Lester C. Tiscornia, Michigan, president, Auto Specialist Manufacturing Co., and John B. Wentz, Stockton, former Stockton City Manager, now senior vice president, American Savings & Loan Association.

Khoury Hall

Baun heads the group charged with completing the funding for the $1.7 million Khoury Hall at the School of Engineering. Gifts and pledges to date total $1.4 million toward the goal.

Assisting Baun on the committee are Fawzi M. Al-Saleh, Kuwait, president, Musaad Al-Saleh & Sons Ltd.; Walter Fellers, Los Angeles, vice president and chief designer, Northrop Corp.; Wilson A. Heefner, Stockton, physician; Henderson McGee, Sacramento, dean emeritus, School of Engineering; John L. Patton, Texas, engineer, Becon Construction Co.; G. William Quiroz, Sacramento, engineer, Teichert Construction; Jay Roek, Stockton, president, Roek Construction; Carlos C. Wood, Napa, UOP Regent, retired vice president, engineering, Sikorsky Aircraft Division, United Technologists, and Robert Young, Sacramento, president, Spink Corporation.

Weber Hall

Witter leads the group that is seeking funding to finance the refurbishing of Weber Hall to become the new home of the School of Business and Public Administration. Two office suites have been completed for eight faculty members, and work is under way on a suite for the school's administrative staff and dean. When the $1.5 million total project is complete, it will provide an executive management training complex, a computer laboratory, various classrooms and a specially equipped negotiation and bargaining room.

Assisting Witter are Hugh P. Barton, Modesto, president, R.P. Barton Co., Inc.; J. Foster Fluetsch, Stockton, president, American Savings & Loan Association; Harold A. Lane, Los Angeles, executive vice president, Financial Resources; Mark Rogo, Los Angeles, vice president, Morton Machinery Co., Inc.; Robert Nikkel, Sacramento, president, Nikkel Corp.; Douglass M. Eberhardt, Stockton, executive vice president, Bank of Stockton, and Mrs. Mary Louise Kornell, St. Helena, Hanns Kornell champagne cellars.

Putnam Appointed University Chaplain

Rev. Gary B. Putnam, campus minister and Wesley Foundation Director at Iowa State University for the past 11 years, has been named to the newly created position of University Chaplain.

The appointment of Putnam was announced jointly by Dr. Stanley E. McCaffrey, UOP president, and Bishop Wilbur W.Y. Choy of the California-Nevada Conference of the United Methodist Church.

The chaplaincy position is funded through a successful $500,000 endowment fund drive conducted jointly by the United Methodist Church and UOP's campaign For A Greater Pacific under the leadership of Bishop Marvin Stuart. University Regents recently named the fund the John D. Crummey Chaplaincy Endowment in honor of the late church leader and long-time Regent who held an honorary degree from UOP and was a past president of the University's Board.

Members of the Crummey family were instrumental in providing a major portion of the endowment fund and have been actively involved with the University and the Methodist Church for more than 80 years.

Rev. Putnam is an ordained minister with a doctorate from the Pacific School of Religion in Berkeley and a B.S. degree from Iowa State. He has more than 15 years of experience as a campus minister at Iowa State, University of Wisconsin at LaCrosse, and the University of Northern Iowa. He also has served as an assistant minister at Methodist churches in Batavia, Illinois and Hollywood.

The position at UOP includes ministerial and counseling duties, occasional class lectures, coordination of campus religious activities, and serving as a chaplain to all segments of the campus community.

Rev. Gary B. Putnam joined the University as Chaplain in August.

An SBPA student completes a computer assignment in the renovated 4-room faculty suite.

Looking Ahead: The 1983-84 Campaign

A goal of $685,000 has been established for the 1983-84 Annual Pacific Fund drive, which is broken down in the following manner:

Alumni	$332,000
Parents	20,500
Friends	65,500
Bus/Corp	200,000
Foundations	50,000
Other	18,500

While $685,000 represents a significant increase over this year's record total, the goal was set only after lengthy examination of the University's financial requirements for the coming year.

Attainment of the new goal not only will require the continued support of this year's contributors, but also depends on the participation of alumni who have not given recently to the University. In recognition of the need to increase alumni support the James Irvine Foundation has continued the Alumni Challenge for 1983-84.

Let's meet the Challenge again.

In Memoriam

Dr. Clifford J. Hand

DR. Clifford J. Hand, academic vice president for the past decade and a member of the faculty and staff for 26 years, died last month after a year-long, valiant struggle with cancer.

A memorial program held in the Conservatory of Music Auditorium on Friday, September 30, was a celebration of his life and his contributions to the University and to young people.

Dr. Hand joined the University in 1957 as a member of the English Department faculty. He went on to become acting dean of College of the Pacific, then academic vice president, and during 1981-82 acting president while President Stanley E. McCaffrey was on leave to serve as president of Rotary International.

Tributes reflecting the versatility of the man were made by friends, associates and a former student in the form of music, poetry and moving words. Musical tributes were presented by the Sierra String Quartet and solos by June Spencer and Audree O'Connell.

Dr. Sy Kahn of the Drama Department closed the program with a reading of William Shakespeare's Sonnet XXX, "When to the Sessions of Sweet Silent Thought."

Following are excerpts from the five "Remembrances" given as part of the program:

President Stanley E. McCaffrey — Clifford Hand was the quintessence of the academic vice president. Clifford was essentially a faculty person. He fully understood the interest and feelings of faculty and knew intrinsically that faculty are the heart of the University...All of us have lost a friend. The University has lost a treasured academic vice president. We mourn his loss, but we cherish his memory. We are grateful for his friendship and for the lasting contribution he has made to the University.

Financial Vice President Robert R.

Winterberg — To me, he represented all that is good and valuable from the past, and yet also all that is special and worthwhile in the present. He listened well, and when he spoke, he spoke with authority, being well prepared and knowledgeable. Cliff combined a keen intellect and an abiding faith in the academic process with an understanding of what was possible to accomplish; yet he was a persistent optimist. He was the most gentle of men, and yet firm and determined when the need arose.

Dr. Robert Harvey — We were graduate students together at the University of Chicago and then in 1952, my first year of teaching, we shared a faculty office...I honestly believe Clifford was a born teacher; he taught me what it was all about...Cliff was fast, active and vigorous in body and in mind. He had an eye. He had a notion the world might mean something if one looked at it carefully. He valued the truth. To think, to talk, to laugh, to see reality up close...all these ordinary human experiences seem somehow remarkable when you do them with Cliff. He found meaning in the world, and for us who knew him, those meanings remain.

CLIFFORD J. HAND
April 9, 1922 — September 27, 1983

Dr. Robert Kreiter, Department of Modern Language and Literature — Janine's and my first meeting with Cliff and Doris was accidental. We arrived in Stockton 25 years ago; we needed to rent a house, and the one we chose was being vacated by Cliff and Doris for a new rental closer to the University...Both Cliff and Doris love people; they speak to people as people...Cliff's highly civilized mind, highly disciplined, ever active, always objective, always creative, has given meaning to all it met...We have always found in Cliff a civilizing force that has given vigor, vision, encouragement, and assistance for the realization of our highest aims.

Randy Bass, Class of 1981 — In my junior year, I had the privilege of spending 2,500 years with Cliff. For two semesters of independent study, Cliff took me by the hand and walked me through the garden of Western culture. We walked past Plato and Cicero, Quintilian and Augustine, from Abelard to Aquinas, Alcuin to Castiglione, from John of Garland to John Dewey, from Emerson to Erasmus. It was a long way to walk in just one year — but then Cliff was a pretty fast walker...For that splendid year, perhaps the greatest lesson I drew was from the man himself...that a decade of pragmatic concerns had not diminished the literate fires which burned inside him. A man who could put away the budget at 9:59 and at 10:01 be accounting the origin of the Quadrivium. It was a pleasure to be his pupil, because he took such pleasure in being my teacher.

University Chaplain Gary B. Putnam presided at the service, and the accompanist was Dr. Charles Schilling. Members of Mortar Board served as ushers.

Dr. Hand is survived by his wife, Doris, and mother, Eva. The family has requested that remembrances be contributions to the UOP Library Building Fund.

The Search For Students

A Call For Volunteers

IN keeping with the new changes adopted by the Admissions Office, a full-time staff member was added to create an admissions assistance program utilizing alumni, faculty and students.

Anne Seed was appointed in August to the newly created position of assistant director of admissions for faculty, alumni and student admissions assist programs, with special emphasis placed on coordinating the alumni.

A UOP graduate and a former admissions representative at DePauw University, Seed says the purpose of the Alumni Admissions Representative (AAR) program is threefold: first, to offer prospective students and their parents a personal, individual contact with alumni of the University; second, to encourage alumni support of admissions events across the country; third, to increase alumni awareness of the role they play in enhancing and broadening the admissions process of the University.

"Our goal is to be on track by December," says Seed, who is still screening potential AARs. Candidates for the program should display enthusiasm for the University and a willingness to make a two-year commitment. Seed, who is coordinating the training, says there will be six representatives in the San Francisco Bay Area, four in Los Angeles, two in San Diego, two in Sacramento and one each in Fresno, Modesto, Stockton, Bakersfield, Santa Barbara and Redding.

Representatives will undergo training on the Stockton campus and at home. For the home portion of the training, Seed is supplying materials which include the alumni admissions handbook, the Pacific Review and a bi-monthly newsletter.

The program is divided into three phases. At the inquiry level, AARs will be asked to acquire names and addresses of prospective UOP students, which will be forwarded to the Admissions Office for processing. The second phase involves contacting an assigned list of students from their geographical area who have expressed interest in learning more about UOP. In this phase pre-printed correspondence is provided, but the representative is encouraged to make a personal call.

In the third phase, representatives will be asked to contact students who have been accepted for admission to UOP.

Seed also plans to involve both faculty and students in the assist program through personal letter writing campaigns and special events on campus. Currently enrolled students, she says, often have the strongest impact on students considering UOP.

High school students interested in music visited with Dr. David Goedecke of the Conservatory during an overnight stay.

Fine Tuning The Recruiting Process

TO counteract the nationwide downward trend in college enrollments, the UOP Admissions Office last year adopted several measures which have proved timely and beneficial in the recruitment of prospective students.

The changes taken included adjustments in the recruitment cycle and financial aid packages.

E. Leslie Medford, dean of admissions, reports these measures have already paid dividends for Pacific. Although applications for the 1983-84 academic year were down eight percent, confirmations were up 7.5 percent. Overall enrollment on the Stockton campus declined by only 21 students, compared with a drop of more than 200 students a year ago, due in part to an increase of 79 new freshmen and transfer students over last year's entering class.

Medford believes that a restructuring of the financial aid packages provided the greatest benefit, compared with the other changes that were adopted. The difference was all incoming freshmen were promised a guaranteed financial award, and these awards were assigned much earlier than in the past. A guaranteed award meant that if a student expected to receive monies from a Cal Grant Scholarship and it did not come through as anticipated, the Financial Aid Office granted that sum to the student. Another facet of the financial aid package involved granting a $50,000 home equity exemption to the parents of the prospective students in evaluating financial need factors.

"While we think that all three of those helped," says Medford, "it's our impression that the accelerated awards mailings probably had the greatest impact."

The acceleration of the recruitment cycle is another important change incorporated by the Admissions Office. In previous years, the cycle paralleled the school year, beginning in September and ending in May, with high school seniors being the primary targets.

Now, however, the recruitment cycle has been moved up five months to April in an effort to cultivate members of the junior class in their spring semester.

The Admissions Office took additional steps in the areas of direct mail, expansion of volunteer forces, on-campus programs and secondary school visits.

In the area of Direct Mail, several changes were implemented. In the past, the Admissions Office procured some 30,000 names from the College Board Search Service, utilizing in their selection process such criteria as SAT score range, GPA range, academic interest and financial situation. A UOP "mini-brochure" and a cover letter were sent to these prospective students in September.

This past year, however, 30,000 additional names were purchased from the College Board Service, bringing the total to 60,000. In addition, names were procured for the first time from the American Testing Service, which is popular in the "plains states," says Medford.

Another newly developed marketing tool is the "major sheet." These one-page publications feature extensive information about a particular major and supplement information contained in the school and college brochures.

It was also decided to reprint the entire recruiting brochure package, which included 10 separate pieces. This brought a substantial savings in the design and preparation of printing materials. In the past, a new design concept of the brochure package was incorporated each year. Beginning in 1984 these collateral materials will be redesigned and then updated and reprinted when necessary.

A second area targeted for change was that of On-Campus Events. In previous years these consisted of California Scholarship Federation Day, which was held in October, and the school and college days held in the spring. Now CSF Day has been moved to April 27, and school and college days have been combined into one All-University Open House, which is scheduled for April 7 next year. Last year's Open House, the first of its kind, attracted 1,400 high school students and was considered a huge success. "We aim that program to students who have been accepted already," reports Medford, "and we hope that by holding it at that date they not only will have their acceptance from us, but from other schools, and are in the process of determining where they want to go."

Meanwhile, two new events have been scheduled and an old one revived. Overnight visits are now available to students in October and November, giving them an opportunity to sample college life, talk with faculty, financial aid and admissions representatives and attend classes.

A self-guided walking tour of the Pacific campus has been implemented through a new brochure. This is designed for persons who come to campus when a regular campus tour is not scheduled.

A Counselor's Day has been revived in an effort to renew relationships with these high school and community college officials.

Concerning the Expansion of Volunteer Forces, a new position was created to coordinate the admissions outreach recruitment program for all faculty, alumni and students.

Another improvement involves expanding faculty contacts with their peers at community colleges to develop relationships, especially in the fields of music, business, engineering, computer science, psychology and the health sciences. "We believe that community college students are directed to colleges more by teachers in their area of interest than they are by community college counselors," notes the Dean of Admissions.

One way that alumni and parents of students can aid the Admissions Office is by sending in names of prospective students, adds Medford.

A fourth area that saw changes this year was in Off-Campus Activities. The Admissions Office increased their annual school visits to 750 this year. For the first time, Japan has been added to the Far East tour, which includes Malaysia, Indonesia, Singapore and Hong Kong. Medford notes that of the 55 more freshmen that enrolled at Pacific this year, 41 were from foreign countries.

Last spring, the Admissions Office incorporated the accelerated recruiting cycle in time to implement several new ideas concerning high school visits and regional meetings. In previous years, school visits occurred in the fall and winter, with regional meetings held in January and February. For the first time last year, admissions representatives visited 100 high schools and held two regional meetings in May. Of the two activities, Medford says the latter was more encouraging. Five more regional meetings are now planned for the spring, 1984, in addition to the normally scheduled regional meetings in the winter.

Medford reports that all of these changes in student recruitment had been considered in the past. However, they received further impetus last year when a noted expert in the admissions field, Dr. William Ihlanfeldt, was called in to evaluate the University's efforts in attracting new students.

Ihlanfeldt's report touched on all the changes that were later adopted by the Admissions Office. "But the increase that we experienced this year," says Medford, "really was without regard to the Ihlanfeldt visit, with the sole exception of the earlier financial awards." Medford says the impact of the other changes, most notably the acceleration of the recruitment cycle, won't be felt until the fall of 1984.

Straight Talk On Street Drugs

IN the 1960s a serious problem developed in this country stemming from the proliferation of street drugs. Stories about drug users crowding hospital emergency rooms received widespread media attention and shocked a confused and angry public.

Information concerning the quality and availability of street drugs was lacking, which accounted for the alarmed public, not to mention numerous overdose cases.

While many health-related professional schools chose to keep a low profile in an effort to maintain a pristine public image, the University of the Pacific's School of Pharmacy sought to dispel the myths surrounding street drugs. Around 1968, the School embarked on a program of community education, offering its faculty and students as a community resource to dispense responsible information concerning drug potency and the consequences of drug abuse. A characteristic of the program was that the information was free of persuasion, sensationalism and moralization.

One of the first steps involved a program called Straight Drug Talk (SDT), which was instituted for the benefit of high-school age students. Second and third-year pharmacy students led open discussions in seventh through 10th grade classrooms on the subject of drugs and their effects. The SDT philosophy was "No scare tactics — present the facts — avoid technical jargon."

The program was presented in high schools from Fresno to Sacramento. In 1970 it received support from the Merck Company Foundation, which began funding the program on a yearly basis.

To assist undergraduates in preparing for the program a course called "Drug Abuse Education" was implemented in the pharmacy curriculum, says Dr. Marvin Malone, one of the course instructors. By 1974, 50 undergraduate students were regularly participating in the program. It was estimated that in 1974 pharmacy students had talked with over 4,000 high school students, giving 125 presentations to 38 schools.

Complementing SDT, two pharmacy professors organized a training institute for high school teachers in setting up drug education programs. Dr. James Thompson and Dr. Max Polinsky began the institute, which attracted teachers from all parts of California and Nevada. The program was documented into a 155-page booklet published with funds donated by Smith, Kline & French, a leading pharmaceutical manufacturer. It was distributed across the nation to school administrators and government officials.

A third step in the pharmacy school informational program originated from Dr. John Brown's practice of analyzing street drugs on an emergency basis as a service to physicians and health facilities in the Central Valley. In contrast with laboratories from the State of California, which required anywhere from one to four weeks to analyze street drugs, Brown developed rapid assay methods which eventually spawned the Community Drug Identification Service. UOP students from the Rho Chi pharmaceutical honorary society volunteered to staff the laboratory and conduct assays on a moment's notice, says Malone, who worked with Brown in the program.

Due to the widespread interest in the assay results a bulletin titled Pacific Information Service On Street Drugs was published and became an instant success.

In time, copies reached a wide audience, including the U.S. Attorney General's Office, selected senators and congressmen, The New York Times, the Columbia Broadcasting System, and various European locations.

The bulletin also was copied and distributed without charge by the Merck, Sharp & Dohme pharmaceutical company to other pharmacy schools and colleges, and medical schools and health care facilities dealing with drug abuse, thereby enlarging the audience in the United States.

In 1978, 10 years after it began, the School of Pharmacy quietly phased out the drug information program. By that time, high school students, their teachers and the general public were much better informed about street drugs, due in part to programs like the one at the UOP School of Pharmacy.

Family Fun At Pacific

Pacific Family Day in September attracted more than 700 people to the Stockton campus for a day-long series of activities for children, teenagers and adults.

The events that were organized by the Pacific Alumni Office included Mathematics Professor William Brown directing youngsters in a search for geometric and computer patterns, campus-wide barbecue, afternoon dance concert staged by the Drama Department, and series of non-competitive, family oriented games that featured use of a parachute.

The faculty-directed seminars for adults including one with English Professor Arlen Hansen discussing Mark Twain's Western Years, attracted capacity crowds.
